A symposium was convened to address the dilemma on "New generation and future of books." The symposium was moderated by Sri Dilip Kumar Phukan, writer and retired teacher, Majuli. Dr. Arbinda Rajkhowa, writer and HOD, North Lakhimpur college (Autonomous) and Dr. Bhaskarjyoti Baruah, social worker and founder of Gyanjyoti library, Majuli as a panellist overtook the session. The felicitation ceremony was conducted by Tulashi Rajkhowa, coordinator of Majuli College Book Fair.

Dr. Arbinda Rajkhowa highlighted that in the age of technology it's hard to find someone from the younger generations that enjoys reading. For them, reading is nothing more than a dull chore, something that should be reserved only for institution and home work. The very idea of reading a book for pleasure is inconceivable to them. They'd much prefer to plug in to their digital world. It is the responsibility of the teachers to teach the younger generation the "art" of reading, or one day, probably sooner than they think, books will be rendered obsolete. Reading for pleasure, and even for exercising the mind is very important for the new generation.

Dr. Bhaskarjyoti Baruah stated the importance of books as books give a person, specially the younger generation, the unstoppable freedom to explore the world. The writers as well as the readers are free to take up topics of their choice and throw open the gates of the fictitious world in their mind.

An interaction round was held among panelist and the students, teachers and other audiences present in the event with well fruited results.
